INTRODUCTION

In a field as new as the modern public welfare program of today the absence of source material is inevitable. Consequently, many agencies and citizens' committees have been faced with the necessity of making studies and reports to learn about their own problems and as a basis of comparison with similar situations in other areas. Also, there has been the need for presenting information to legislative bodies and to provide material which would enable the citizen to learn of the work which the public agencies are doing in the field of social welfare.

Partial lists of such studies have appeared in various forms over the past seven years. However, realizing the value of having this information listed in one place we have compiled, according to each state, a list of studies which have been made since 1932. This list is not exhaustive; rather it represents for the most part those studies which are available in our own library or from the agencies, or have appeared in other compilations and are accepted as source material by persons in the field of research. It is true that some of the material may not be readily available; in some instances it is included to indicate the scope and extent of studies which various states have undertaken.

Annotations are not included in this list; however, the Federal Social Security Board has recently (October 10, 1939) published an annotated list of special studies in the field of public welfare and the titles of such studies which appear here have before them the key "#" indicating that the reader can obtain further information by consulting the Board's compilation.

Those studies marked with an asterisk (*) are part of the collection of the Ben Tidball Memorial Library, State Department of Social Security, Olympia, Washington.

The list as presented here does not include any regional or national studies during these years. An appendix contains a brief list of studies in this field.

Principal bibliographies which were consulted in making this compilation or which may be useful to persons seeking further information include the following:

SPECIAL STUDIES IN THE FIELD OF PUBLIC WELFARE. Prepared by Federal Security Agency (Social Security Board: Bureau of Research and Statistics of the Division of Public Assistance Research). Washington, D. C. October 10, 1939.

Contains an annotated list for which accessions will be released from time to time.
Symbol "#" in the list that follows indicates that such studies are contained in the Board's compilation.
